STATE COLLEGE MAN KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE

Henry Woomer, Becoming Confused, Meets Death at Lamar.

FAMILY SEE ACCIDENT

Henry Woomer, well known resident of State College, was killed almost instantly as a result of his being struck by a Cadillac touring car on the State highway, at Lamar, last Sunday morning. The accident, which was unavoidable, was witnessed by a daughter and other relatives of the unfortunate man. John L. Folk, of Houtzdale, who was driving the car which killed Mr. Woomer, was exonerated from all blame. He did everything possible to avoid an accident, afterward stopping to render assistance, and giving himself up for any action the authorities might deem warranted.

The accident, which happened shortly after 10 o'clock in the morning, suddenly terminated what had been planned as a pleasure trip to Sugar Valley. The car which Mr. Woomer and several others occupied was driven by his nephew, Charles Kern. They stopped and parked off the highway at Lamar, where Mr. Woomer walked across the road to buy soft drinks at a refreshment stand. He had made a second trip across the highway and was about to return, stepping out from behind a Ford coupe, when he became confused upon observing the Cadillac touring car approach. He was knocked down and dragged probably twenty feet, suffering a fractured skull and other injuries. He died in about twenty minutes.

Deceased was nearly 76 years old, having been born at Tylersville, December 4th, 1848, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Woomer. His wife, who was Elizabeth P. Miller, died on November 3d, 1903. Surviving are these children: Mrs. Daniel (Cora E.) Showalter, of Bellefonte; Mrs. James Buss, of Sunbury; Mrs. Robert Edminston, of State College; Lloyd, of AxeMann; Wallace, Harry, Carrie and Ruth, of State College, and Percy, of Cleveland, O. Surviving also are a brother, Markle Woomer, of State College, and a sister, Mrs. Amelia Kern of nearby State College.

Funeral services were held Wednesday morning from the home of Harry Woomer, ot State College, conducted by Rev. Mr. Mackey. Burial was made a the Meyers cemetery.

CHILD FALLS 15 FEET

Walked in Sleep and Toppled Through Window at Milesburg.

Robert, 10 years old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Long, of Pittsburgh, miraculously escaped being killed when, while walking in his sleep Monday night at the Mrs. W. T. Fulton home at Milesburg, he toppled through a second-story window to the ground, a distance of 15 feet. He sustained a fracture of the left arm, and some bruises, but otherwise apparently was not injured.

The child and parents had been visiting at Lock Haven and were motoring to their home, stopping over night with Mrs. Fulton, who is a cousin. The window through which the child fell was protected with a screen, but this gave way when he leaned against it. He had no recollection of his getting up or going to the window.

Crashed Into Pole.

A new Jewett sedan crashed into a telephone pole near Mingoville on Sunday, considerably damaging the car although none of the occupants were injured. The car was the property of J. A. Gelgaller of Scranton, who, with his wife and small son, was touring this part of the state. The child was occupying the rear seat of the car and his father happened to look back just as he was about to tumble out of the door, which had come open in some unknown manner. Naturally he let go of the wheel and reached back to grasp the child and in so doing lost control. Before he could again get hold of the steering wheel the car had crashed into the pole.

Collision at Busy Corner.

Mrs. David R. Beveridge was the victim of a recklessly driven car last Thursday afternoon about 3 o'clock, as she was driving up High St. in her Chevrolet coupe. A Buick touring car owned by a man from Orviston, headed south on Spring St., approached the crossing at a high rate of speed, it is alleged, and crashed into the Chevrolet broadside. Mrs. Beveridge secured the license number of the car. The Chevrolet sustained a broken wheel and fender.

COURT EXTENDED MERCY

Judge Quigley, However, Severely Reprimands Law Violators.

Two alleged violators of the prohibition laws were the first to face Judge Henry C. Quigley last Saturday morning at a special session of Court. Raymond Rudy and Jesse Deering, of near State College, were arrested by Officer Mingle for operating a still on Deering's farm. Deering was not present at the time of the discovery of the still, and could not be implicated in any way. Rudy, who was operating the still, escaped the law on a technicality, there not being any liquor found on the premises at the time. Both men were freed by the Court after a severe lecture.

Attorney J. Kennedy Johnston appeared as counsel to defend Rudy and Deering on the bootlegging charge. District Attorney Dale appeared for the prosecution. Officer Mingle explained to the Court that while a still and some mash had been found, no moonshine liquor had been discovered. This raised the question as to whether the two men were actually liable on the charge of bootlegging and illegal manufacture of liquors. The form of indictment as origidally prepared was apparently based on the presumption that Mr. Johnston's clients were ready to plead guilty. When the question was raised involving doubt as to whether the law actually covered the case in question, Mr. Dale and Attorney Johnston scrutinized the statute. Mr. Johnson, addressing the Court, explained that there was some doubt as to the liability of his clients, whereupon Judge Quigley said that he reluctantly conceded such to be the case and that he had no alternative but to discharge them. Attorney Johnston made a formal motion for their discharge, and this was was granted.

Judge Quigley in addressing Attorney Johnston's clients, told them bluntly that they might consider themselves very lucky. He pointed out that it was only due to the alertness of Officer Mingle in arresting them when he did that both were escaping conviction and sentence as bootleggers. Had Officer Mingle waited a few days before arresting Rudy and Deering, Judge Quigley declared, the mash would have been converted into illegal liquor and both defendants would be in a position where escape on technical grounds would be an impossibility. He warned them to stop such business.

B. F. Clewell, of Port Matilda, arrested on the charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, also being in illegal possession of liquor, was paroled for a year upon his signing the pledge to abstain from liquor entirely.

George and Arthur Gentzel pleaded guilty to the charge of breaking and entering, and larceny, in the garages of Schreck Brothers, at Lemont, and John Meese, at AxeMann. In the view of the Court, the case was one of "too much automobile," the younger boy having recently purchased a second hand car on the installment plan and did not have sufficient money to purchase the necessary accessories to make it serviceable. They were paroled for two years.

Earl Smith, of near State College pleaded guilty to giving a worthless check to the Duquesne Sales Co., of Pittsburgh, as a payment on a new Ford car purchased at State College. He sold the car to another person, not having any legal right to do so. His father made restitution to the company, who requested that the case be annulled. The offender was released after a severe reprimand was administered from the bench.

ENTERTAIN 28TH OFFICERS

Dinner for Gen. Martin and Dedication of Argonne Cross.

Colonel Theodore Davis Boal will be host at a dinner in honor of General Martin, at the Officers Club, 28th Division, A. E. F., at Boalsburg, on Friday evening. This will be the first of a series of social and business events incident to a meeting of some of the officers of the Division.

On Saturday afternoon there will be a dedication of the Argonne cross. It was in front of this cross that General Edward Sigerfoos was killed. The dedication will be held about 4 o'clock and will be open to the public.

Car Forced Into Bank.

A Buick touring car, driven by Professor M. S. McDowell, of State College was forced off the road on Monday afternoon and into the dirt bank just this side of the College. A Cadillac, owned by a priest from Renovo, but not driven by him, attempted to pass another car coming in the opposite direction from the McDowell car, forcing the latter car into the bank. The right front wheel of the Buick was broken. No one was hurt.

COUNTY HALF-HOLIDAY DEFENSE DAY PROGRAM

Exercises in Bellefonte, State College and Boalsburg.

THOUSANDS ENROLLED

A very successful meeting of the civilian and military committees on National Defense Day, Sept. 12, was held in the Court House on Friday evening and the following committees appointed:

General chairman, John Payne; Finance, W. Harrison Walker and W. J. Emerick; Publicity, Rev. W. P. Ard, R. T. Smith, J. W. Smith, H. M. Beezer and C. L. Gates. The civilian committee, which includes Hon. H. C. Quigley, W. Harrison Walker, William Emerick, George Carpeneto and Roy Wilkinson will have charge of all ceremonies. The military committee, who are Capt. H. S. Miller, Capt. E. R. Taylor, Lieut. G. C. Payne and Lieut. W. P. Ard, will be responsible for all enrollments, of which it is hoped there will be about 500. That number of men are needed to fill up the various National Guard and Reserve Corps allotted to this district for the day.

The civilian division of the parade, which will form on Linn St., will include all fraternal organizations, Red Cross, fire companies, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, etc. The military division will include the Headquarters Detachment and Troop B, of the 52nd M. G. Squadron, a company of reserve infantry, under Capt. E. R. Taplor, and a battery of artillery, yet to be appointed. This part of the demonstration will begin promptly at 1:30 and move on Allegheny to Bishop, west on Bishop to Spring, south on Spring to High, west on High to the P. R. R. station, where they will countermarch to the Diamond and form for the addresses. Col. Hugh S. Taylor will be the principal speaker.

Immediately after the parade there will be a ball game between Bellefonte and some out-of-town team, at Hughes field, the admission to which will be absolutely free. A "Defense Day Ball" will be held in the armory in the evening, which will also be free to the public.

Every other section of the country is going to put this defense idea "over the top" with a bang, and it is up to the citizens of this community to do their part. The entire affair is primarily a citizens matter, and the military element will hold a secondary place throughout the day. The National Guard units have merely been ordered out by the President to assist in the demonstration and to help get the ball rolling. A recruiting tent will be maintained at the Grange picnic throughout the entire week. This tent will have cards on hand which will concisely explain the purpose of the Defense Test and will enlist men for one day only in any organization they wish. Every man between the ages of 16 and 45 is eligible for enlistment.

State College and Boalsburg will observe Defense Day with elaborate exercises. Boalsburg will have an old-fashion basket picnic on the Boal grounds and representatives are expected to be present from all that section between Woodward and Penna. Furnace. Two brass bands will be on hand to enliven things throughout the day. There will be two snappy baseball games. Refreshments may be purchased on the picnic grounds. There will be amusements to please everybody, and a general good time is in store for all.

While the plans for the celebration day are being perfected, canvassers are calling upon citizens and securing their signatures to papers enlisting for the occasion. All citizens between the ages of 16 and 45 years are eligible for enlistment. Those who present themselves at Boalsburg will be furnished with enlistment certificates which will be suitable for framing.

A large turn-out is promised for the grand parade, military, civic and other fraternal organizations participating. Men of State and national prominence will deliver addresses during the afternoon.

Defense Day marks the sixth anniversary of the battle of St. Miehl. As such it will be observed with feelings of patriotism not only in various sections of Centre County, but throughout the State and nation.

Defense Day Pointers.

No parking from one o'clock to three o'clock on any part of the Diamond, or on either side of High Street from the Diamond to the P. R. R. station.

Bellefonte stores will be closed at noon Sept. 12th, but will remain open Thursday afternoon, Sept. 11th.

BIG CROWD EXPECTED AT GRANGE PARK TODAY

Congressman Gilbert, of Indiana, Scheduled to Speak.

IS "REPUBLICAN DAY"

So far as the weather was concerned, the Grangers Picnic got off to a bad start on Tuesday, when rain came down in torrents, but Wednesday was an ideal day, and today gives promise of being equally nice. Wednesday a large crowd was on the picnic grounds, and if good weather prevails throughout today an even larger throng is expected.

The annual reunion of the Centre County Veterans Club was the big feature of the Wednesday program. The ranks of the Civil War vets are thinning so rapidly that but a mere handful of the Boys in Blue remain, but what they lack in numbers they more than make up in spirit. Officers of the club elected for the ensuing year follow: W. Henry Bartholomew, president; Henry Myers, first vice president; D. B. Brisbin, second vice president; Capt. W. H. Fry, secretary, and Capt. Geo. Boal, treasurer.

John McSparran, master of the State Grange, and Fred Brenckman, secretary, are delivering addresses at the park today. Aside from that, the day will be given over largely to Republican candidates, and if the skies are sunny they will be on hand to make all the hay possible. Congressman W. I. Swoope, of Clearfield, who is a candidate for re-election, is scheduled to be present, as is also J. Laird Holmes, of State College, Republican nominee for the Legislature. County Chairman W. I. Fleming and a group of local Republicans departed this morning for Grange Park, accompanying Congressman Newton W. Gilbert of Indiana, who will speak at a meeting in the auditorium during the afternoon. Mr. Gilbert was at one time Vice Governor General of the Philippine Islands.

An unusually large number of persons are camping at the park for the entire week. The list includes:

VIEWERS MAKE AWARDS IN TOLL ROAD CASES

Millheim to Coburn, $2000; Millheim Through Narrows, $3000.

OWNERS WILL APPEAL

The Centre County Board of Road Viewers, after sitting as a jury to hear testimony relative to the value of the Millheim turnpike, leading from the diamond in that town to Coburn, and also the road leading from Millheim through the narrows to the Brush Valley road, on Wednesday filed reports of appraisements. The first-named road is appraised at $2,000, and the latter at $3,000. In each instance the appraisement is only about one-fourth the amount asked for the two toll roads by the owners. Judge Quigley, with whom the reports were filed, formally approved them, and unless exceptions are entered within a given time confirmation will be made final. It was stated that the owners will appeal from the reports, asking for jury trials in Court.

The viewers in their appraisements allow the owners of both roads to remove toll gates and other buildings. The appraisement of the road from Millheim to Coburn does not include in any way a mortgage for upward of $5,000 standing against the same.

When the county takes over the two roads, at a price finally acceptable to the owners, there will confront the County Commissioners the problem of rebuilding several bridges on the route from Millheim to Coburn. It is estimated that the cost of new bridges will be $15,000, at least. This road, it is stated, may properly be classified as a township road, in which event the cost for new bridges would fall upon Penn Township. The road from Millheim through the narrows, connecting with the Brush Valley road, will eventually be taken over by the State, it is said.

COUNCIL NOTES

Borough Not Entitled to State Aid on Spring Street Paving.

At the regular meeting of Council on Monday evening Conrad Miller was present and requested that Homer Baldwin be compelled to place a sidewalk in front of his property on Ridge St., which adjoins that of Mr. Miller. He also requested that the old plank crossing at the intersection of Ridge and Howard Sts. be replaced with one of concrete or brick.

The matter of whether or not the borough is entitled to State aid on the Spring St. paving project, between Bishop and Howard Sts., which was brought up at the last previous meeting, was again before Council. The borough solicitor was in receipt of a letter from the State authorities, explaining that State-aid for any borough project in 1924 should have been requested prior to November, 1923. As the request was not made before that time no aid will be forthcoming.

The State Board of Health has decreed that the sewage disposal pipe, which enters into Spring creek about 200 feet above the High St. bridge, must be moved so that sewage will enter the stream directly underneath the bridge. This can be done, either by submerging the pipe, or by hanging it to the wall. Referred to the street and sanitary committees.

The secretary of Council announced that notices had been sent to property owners who are in possession of the hopper toilet, cooling troughs and other water wasting devices, and that very courteous co-operation had been received from everyone relative to the removal thereof. The finance committee requested permission for the renewal of $4,000 in notes due. Purchase of a recording typewriter was recommended and approved. Payment of $35 salary to health officer George Glenn was authorized.

Gas Station Sold.

On Tuesday of this week the Keystone Filling Station, located on East Bishop St., was sold to the Imperial Refining Co., of Lock Haven, and in the near future will be the headquarters of the local branch of that company. The station will handle Imperial products exclusively, in addition to a line of accessories.

Stopped Paddle Wheels.

Sheriff Taylor, of Centre County, and Sheriff Hanna, of Clinton County, closed up a number of slot machines and paddle wheels in operation at the picnic at Hecla Park Monday. No arrests were made.

WHEY AND MANY DIFFERENT USES FOR IT

Whey Lemonade Is Quite Refreshing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Just as buttermilk represents what is left from cream in butter making, so whey represents what is left from milk in cheese making. Though less nutritious than buttermilk and skim milk, since it contains less protein, whey may be substituted for them in making bread and other cooked foods, and it is also useful in some cases as a mild laxative drink for invalids.

Whey that differs little in composition from regular cheese whey, may be made at home by cooking sweet milk with some acid material, such as vinegar, lemon juice, or cream of tartar, or even with sour milk, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Fresh curds and whey is an old-fashioned dish still used to some extent, though less common than it was when cheese making was regularly carried on in the home.

Whey Lemonade and Punch.

1 quart whey.
6 tablespoonfuls sugar.
Juice of 2 lemons.
Slices of lemon or a little grated or diced rind, nutmeg or cinnamon.

Mix, chill and serve as a beverage.

Variations.—Double the quantity of lemon juice and of sugar and add other fruit juices and a little fruit cut in small pieces. This transforms whey lemonade into whey punch. Set the punch away to chill and ripen; serve with crushed ice if desired. Rhubarb, pineapple, grape, currant and cherry juices lend themselves well to whey punch. A sprig of freshly crushed mint is sometimes added. Nutmeg or cinnamon will overcome any characteristic whey flavor. Whey punch may be frozen if desired.

Whey Honey.

1 cupful whey.
1-3 cupful sugar, either white or brown.
½ cupful corn sirup.

Mix whey and sugar and boil the mixture till it is of the consistency of strained honey. This sirup will keep indefinitely if properly bottled and is delicious for spreading on waffles or pancakes. Used a little thinner it makes an excellent pudding sauce. Since it requires no thickening it is the easiest possible sauce to make.

RICE IS EXCELLENT BASIS FOR SALADS

Useful Also in Fixing Up Left-Overs of Many Kinds.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Cold boiled rice, if very dry and flaky, is an excellent basis for many salads and may be the means of using left-overs of vegetables, fruits, meat, or fish, says the United States Department of Agriculture. For instance, left-over peas, carrots, green beans, or fresh tomatoes may be combined with left-over rice, and small amounts of fresh fruits may be used in the same way. Grapefruit makes a delicious salad served with rice and French dressing. Plain, cold boiled rice or cold pressed rice may be served with lettuce with a hot or cold cheese dressing or with mayonnaise. Either adds greatly to the nutritive value of the dish and gives it a distinctive flavor. Because of its texture, rice readily takes up the flavor of any dressing.

A Delicious Salad Served With Rice.

Souffle of Peas Useful for Luncheon or Supper

Lima beans, split peas, cowpeas or fresh or canned green peas may be used to make a luncheon or supper dish that is fairly substantial, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

4 tablespoonfuls flour
4 tablespoonfuls fat
1 cupful skim milk
1 cupful mashed cooked peas (any kind)
2 eggs
1 teaspoonful salt
¼ teaspoonful pepper
Few drops of onion juice

Make a white sauce from flour, fat and milk. Mash the cooked peas to a pulp. Beat white and yolks of eggs separately. Mix vegtable pulp, seasonings, sauce and well-beaten yolks. Fold in stiffly beaten whites, put in greased baking dish and bake in slow oven until firm.

Stuffed Green Peppers

6 green peppers.
2¼ cupfuls fresh corn.
½ onion cut up fine.
1½ cupfuls meat chopped or ground fine.
Dash of pepper.
1½ cupfuls meat stock thickened with 2 tablespoonfuls flour.
1½ cupfuls bread crumbs.
½ teaspoonful salt.

Remove the tops and seeds from the peppers and parboil in boiling water for two minutes. Remove from the water, drain, and put in a casserole. Stuff the peppers with a mixture of the corn, onion, meat, bread crumbs, thickened stock mixture, and seasoning and bake. Canned corn may be used. The mixture may be varied by using other materials such as rice and tomatoes, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture.

LAMB FOREQUARTERS ECONOMICAL MEAT

Several Excellent Ways of Cooking Are Suggested.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A breast of lamb, mutton or veal, sometimes presents a problem, as it contains more fat and skin and less meat than other parts of the lamb, and yet it is often economical to buy an entire forequarter of lamb, or necessary to dispose of this part when slaughtering on the farm. One way to prepare a breast is to make a pocket under the skin, fill it with bread stuffing and bake it, so that the thin layer of meat is protected by the stuffing from drying out. Other good ways of preparing a forequarter of lamb or mutton are suggested by the United States Department of Agriculture. They apply equally to a breast of veal.

Braised Breast of Lamb or Mutton.

Season a breast or shoulder of lamb or mutton, place in a covered casserole or roaster and surround by vegetables prepared as in the following recipe. Add a little water, cover the pan closely, and cook in a slow oven until the meat is tender, probably from an hour and a half to three hours.

Breast of Lamb With Vegetables.

Season a breast of lamb with salt and pepper and simmer until the bones can be slipped out easily. Remove from the water. In the meat stock cook vegetables such as turnips, carrots, celery, or onions cut in small pieces, green beans, peas, and okra. More salt may be needed. A few potatoes cut small may be added to cook during the last 20 minutes.

Remove the bones from the meat, fold it together, and secure with small skewers or twine. Dredge with flour and brown on both sides in hot fat. Place on a hot platter and surround it with the vegetables which have been well drained. Use the meat stock for soup, skimming it when cold.

Preferred Combination of Meat and Vegetables

Among the many combinations of meat and vegetables which constitute a stew, the recipe below is preferred in parts of Virginia and Georgia, and is one of the dishes made popular by canning club girls under the direction of the United States Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural colleges.

The meat should be cut up in pieces and browned before stewing. A sour sauce may be made of vinegar, tomato catsup, a little worcestershire sauce and pepper to taste. The meat should be simmered in this sauce till nearly done, the vegetables then added, and the cooking completed.

4 pounds of beef or pork
2 pounds liver (boiled)
Small piece of fat meat for seasoning
1 quart sweet corn, cut from cob or canned
1 quart peas, or lima beans
1 quart tomatoes

Household Questions

If the house has no running water that's the first improvement needed.

* * *

Careless paring of potatoes or fruits often wastes as much as 20 per cent of their food material.

* * *

Tin cans have their place, but their place is not in the back yard, half full of water and serving as happy homes for mosquitoes.

Roman Campagna Is Abode of Poverty

People Work Hard but Can't Combat Malaria.

Rome.—Life in the Campagna for the ordinary peasant woman is very much the same as it was in the days of Servius Tullius. Take half an hour's railway journey out of Rome and walk back in the direction of that city, and today you still will encounter wild-looking men clad mainly in goatskins, driving before them scraggy looking herds of goats and sheep and savage sheep dogs in attendance—far more awe-inspring than the captive wolf on the Capitoline hill. To the observer the poverty-stricken holdings and pitiful attempts at farms all seem alike submerged in ruin and misery, though the inhabitants recognize different degrees of squalor and prosperity.

Love plays a large part in the lives of these peasants, and after the preliminaries have been settled the next recognized stage in the proceedings is for the bridegroom-elect to provide a capanna—the poor little hut, in comparison with which a thatched cottage is an establishment de luxe. The householder will personally lay the ring of foundation stones for the hut, then fell the young trees from the nearest wood, a friend helping with the framework of tree trunks. Onto this frame he places layer upon layer of straw, and, fastening all down, completes his building by leaving a tiny chimney-hole at the top.

Running Brook a Luxury.

Happy is she whose man has had the good sense to build a capanna with a brook running in front, so she may be spared the toil of a couple of miles' tramp under a broiling sun with a heavy basket of clothes on her head to accomplish the family wash. An orange tree on one side of the hut and a prickly pear tree covering the wall on the other side is the sole concession to elegance. Should the bride wish to attempt any cooking, she will have to make friends with a neighbor, for the average newly married couple's capanna has no furnace.

In time, if things prosper, both working together, they may accomplish a furnace of stones, and leading on from this the next ambitious achievement will be a little thatched pen, like a miniature Indian wigwam, for the pig. The donkey, hens and ducks will continue living with the family until such a time as the two are in a position to provide a rough, oblong shelter. Indeed, by dint of sheer perpetual hard work, grit and continual self-denial, they might manage well enough were it not for the curse of the Campagna—malaria.

Country of Yellow Faces.

Even yet, in spite of continued efforts on the part of the government, the Campagna remains the "country of the yellow faces," where malaria has so changed the blood of sturdy farmers, vigorous fishermen, strong, healthy shepherds and charcoal burners that they crawl about like so many corpses until death seizes them.

The poor wretch in the throes of tertian fever, finding no comfort on his wretched pile of straw that serves for bed, asks his wife to light a fire, and immediately the room is choked with wood smoke, for which there is insufficient escape. In the throes of a deadly chill, he drags himself outside to borrow a little warmth from the sun, and he and his wife wait with dumb fatality for the fever to abate and bring a more or less prolonged respite, or for the heavier fever that brings release. More often than not both suffer together.

For the majority the doctor is more or less a chimera, an un-get-at-able person who lives in the fortress strongholds of the mountains. Moreover, how can people whose sole idea of luxury is an occasional treat of black dough flavored with bacon and lamb find the money to pay his fee, let alone the horse to act as conveyance? So one accepts the inevitable and either dies or recovers; and, of course, there is quinine, which the government now supplies gratis in many districts.

London Society Is "Hunting Treasure"

London.—A fine and suspension of her driving license, imposed on the Hon. Lois Sturt, a socially prominent young woman of London, for speeding at the rate of 50 miles an hour in Regent park, has brought into the light the activities of what has come to be known as the "Society of Bright Young People."

The arrest and fine revealed that the latest hobby of the younger social set is the elaborately organized "treasure hunt." Money is secreted in various parts of London, and motor parties follow the trail from point to point, with clues which involve a combination of quotations or the solving of acrostics.

Lady Diana Cooper is one of the keenest players in this game, the style of which may henceforth be cramped, however, by Miss Sturt's breach of the speed laws. She was glad to inform the court, however, that she had carried off the prize in the contest.

Soulful Greetings Block Traffic in Paris Subway

Paris.—Romance has to get out of the path of progress. Paris, among its other picturesque aspects, always seemed to Americans like a great "lovers' lane," especially in the morning and evening, when young people go along hand in hand to and from work, and at parting and reuniting stand sometimes for minutes locked in a fond embrace as though saying farewell forever.

The city authorities have stationed censors to break up these soulful greetings in the subway stations.

Should Lead World in Pulp Wood Crop

United States Capable of Producing Own Supply.

Washington.—As in the production of corn crops, the United States can lead the world in the production of timber crops for pulp wood, declares the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture, in its new publication on pulp wood supplies.

This report was prepared in co-operation with the American Paper and Pulp association, and represents the most comprehensive survey of pulp wood resources ever made in this country. It has been printed as a public document and is available for general distribution upon request to the forest service, Washington, D. C.

To understand the paper and pulp situation now confronting the United States, the report says, it is necessary to realize that over 90 per cent of all paper consumed in the United States is made from wood, and that 100 per cent of news-print paper is so made.

The consumption of paper in the United States amounts to 8,000,000 tons a year. It takes over 9,000,000 cords of wood to make this amount. At the present time this nation imports over half its paper supply in the form of finished paper, pulp and wood suitable for making pulp.

But the forest service declares the United States can become independent of foreign countries for its paper supply by, first, growing larger timber crops on forest land; second, by better utilization of forest products; and third, by the expansion of paper-making processes so that more species of timber can be used for pulp wood.

Farmer Biggest Timber Owner.

At the present time, the newly published report states, the United States contains 470,000,000 acres of forest land not needed or taken by agriculture. It is upon these lands that larger timber crops should be grown. The farmer is the largest single class of timber land owners, having about 150,000,000 acres, or one-third, in the form of small woodlots. The potential productivity of this timber land is higher than that of any other which is an important paper-producing nation.

The principal species of timber now used in making paper are spruce, fir, hemlock and poplar. One reason why the United States is forced to import over half its paper supply is because of the centralization of the paper-making industry in the northeast and lake states where large stands of spruce, fir, hemlock and poplar were once available in large quantities. But as these timber stands were also called upon to furnish a large share of the country's lumber supply, they have been drained to such an extent that they no longer can meet increasing demands.

New York ranks first as a paper-producing state, yet gets over half its raw materials from outside. Pennsylvania ranks second, and also has to depend upon outside sources. Wisconsin is the third largest paper-making state, and it, too, is forced to go outside its boundaries for much of its raw materials.

The optimistic note in the report is furnished by the fact that Washington, Oregon, California and Alaska, together with the pine timber in the South, still contain soft-wood forests which can be utilized for paper making if these forests are logged in a wise fashion and protected from the terrible devastation caused by forest fires.

Paper Supply Is Vital.

"To show the vital necessity for this nation to have ample supplies of paper for all time," says a statement from the forest service, "it is only necessary to point out the fact that our per capita consumption is twice that of Great Britain, the next largest paper-consuming nation. Social and economic questions would be involved if this country's supply of paper and paper products were to be curtailed.

"The public has an interest in this problem which it can help solve by legislation looking to the protection of forest land from fire and other forms of devastation, and by continued research into methods of timber growing and utilization.

"The paper and pulp industry should, to safeguard its own interest, assume the leadership in timber growing upon its own forest land and those upon which it is dependent for pulp-wood supplies."

Nervy Art Work in the Jungle

"Truce of God"

During the Middle ages private warfare became very common. To suppress it—or, at any rate, to limit it—the church synods passed decrees that such fighting could not take place at certain holy seasons, or on certain days. It was so arranged that only 80 days in summer time were left for fighting. These edicts were not very scrupulously obeyed. Sometimes the king lent the truce the weight of his authority, and thus made it the peace of the land.

The commercial magnate paid a surprise visit to a branch office and discovered a junior slacking.

"You're fired!" he shouted. "Take this note to the cashier."

He scribbled a note in the hand which everybody in the company knew, but which nobody had ever been able to read.

After looking at it upside down and from the northern and eastern aspects, the junior took it to the cashier.

"What's all this about?" asked the latter, after a severe mental struggle, and hoping that he held the slip the right way up.

"I can't read it," said the lad, "but the boss said he wanted me to have a $10 raise."—Boston Globe.

Hard Luck Record

Richard Luze, driving his car to town, skidded into a telephone pole. Coming back with the garage man to clear up the wreck he found thieves had stripped it of tires and fixtures. Walking home in the rain two highwaymen with howitzers took all his cash, a watch and his package of plug cut away from him. Finally reaching home Luze discovered lightning had struck the barn, killing a $250 Missouri mule, and that the hired man lit out with the family savings amounting to $140. This made Luze a loser five times in one day.—Capper's Weekly.

INDIGESTION

Fortunate indeed is the individual free from the distressing pangs of indigestion or dyspepsia. Carelessness in what and how we eat has made these ailments well nigh universal. If we could only slow down, live a bit more placidly, much of this stomach trouble would disappear.

Yet, even though we cannot, or will not, take time to eat as we should, there is no need for anyone to suffer the torments of gas, biliousness, nausea, indigestion or constipation. A splendid preventative and relief has been discovered. Doctors are now recommending Jaques' Digestive Capsules. These capsules give prompt relief, tone up the entire system, aid in waste elimination. Taken after eating, absolutely prevent stomach distress. Taken regularly, they correct chronic cases. 60c at druggists, or direct from Jaques Capsule Co., Plattsburg, N. Y.

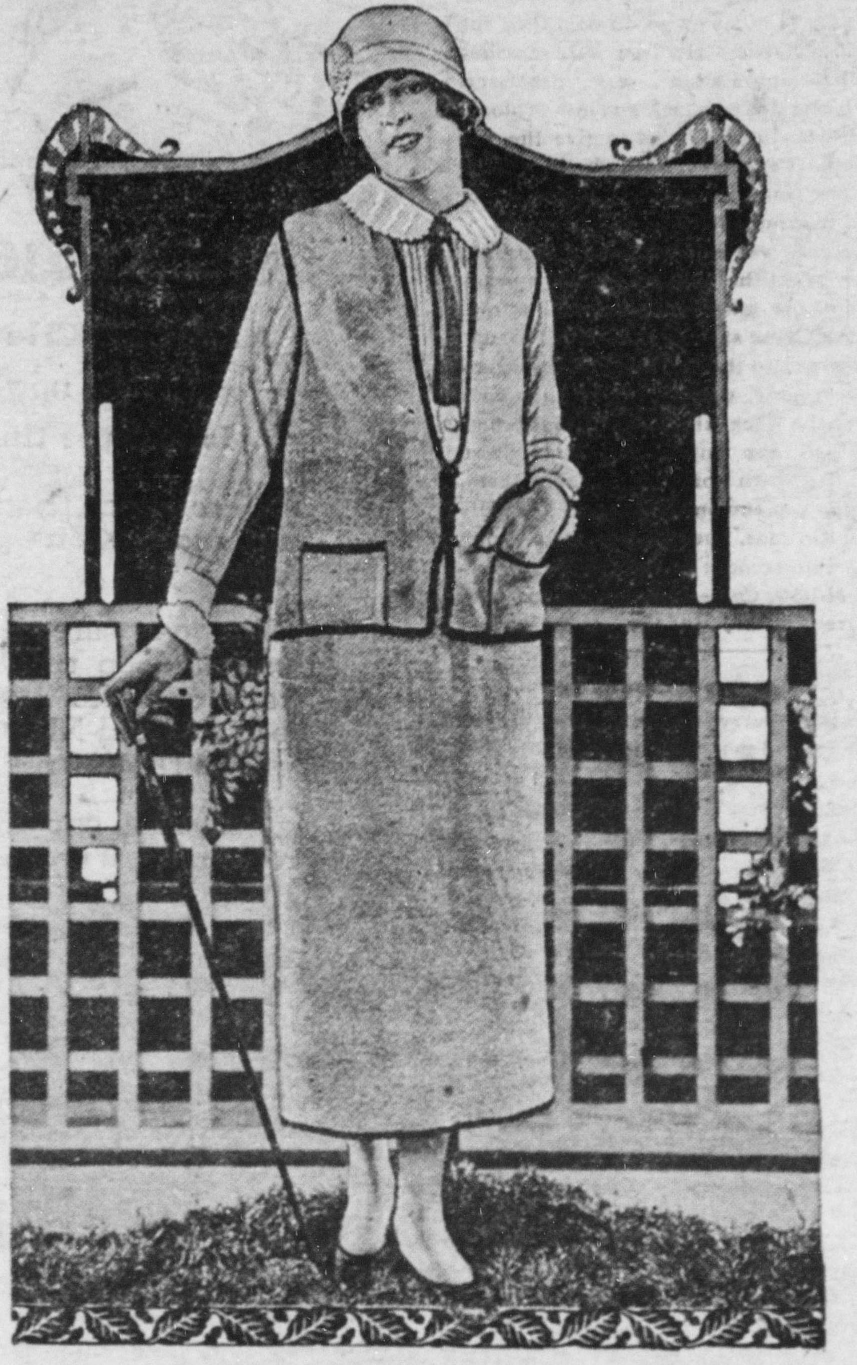
Sleeveless Knitted Fall Suit; Effective and Not Expensive

NOW comes autumn with its cool days and its warm days with "Indian summer" yet to be. Though the thermometer play pranks, a two-piece knitted suit will prove equal to the capriciousness of most any sort of weather. If one owns a knitted skirt with matching sleeveless coatee, the possibilities for adjusting to meet the circumstances are many.

When mellow days are bathed in sunshine unwanted are sleeves in one's knitted suit. That is why the sleeveless kind are so popular, being not too warm, too cool, too burdensome, just right!



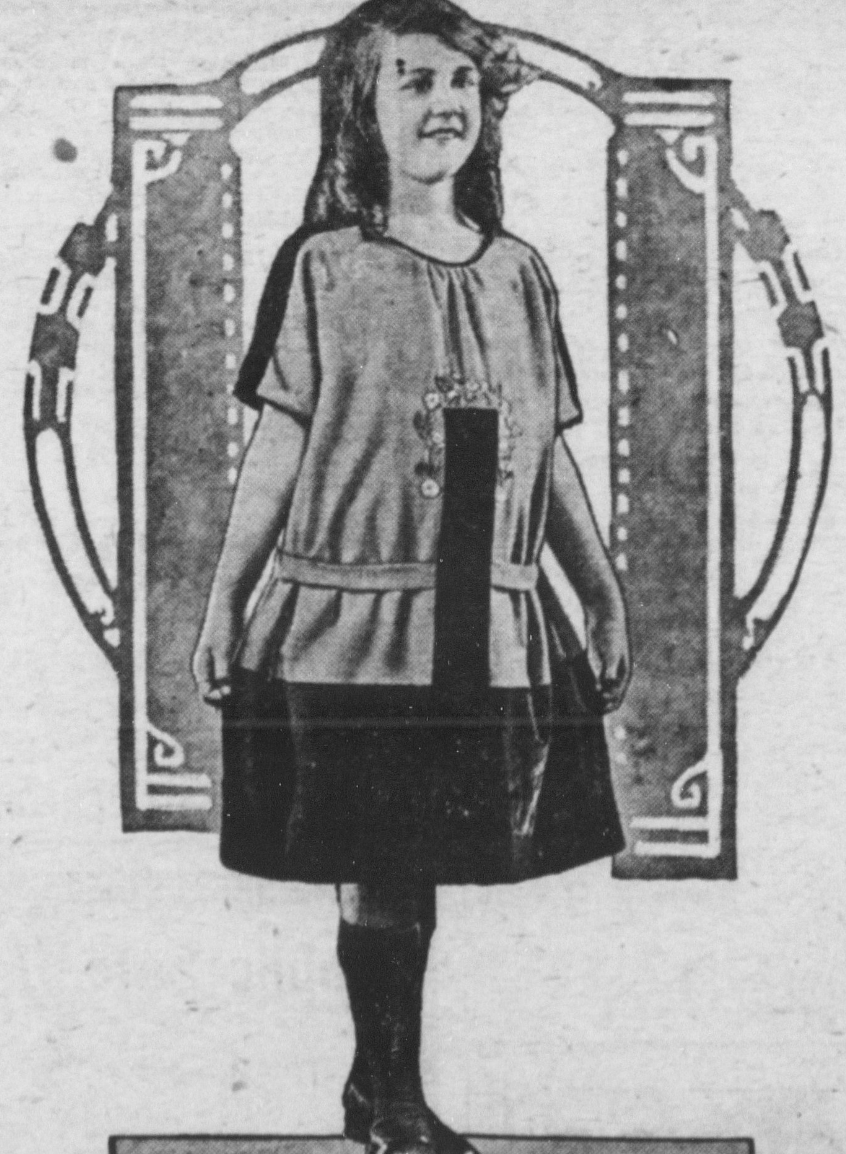
KNITTED SUIT SURE OF POPULARITY

Yet there come times between when autumn winds are sure to chill. A sleeveless jacquette-with-skirt, plus a lightweight knitted jumper substituted for the lingerie blouse proves equal to the occasion. Not only does this combination assure comfort, but more than that it converts a two-piece suit into a swagger three-piece knitted ensemble.

Take as a working basis this very model shown in the picture. It is a suit trimly tailored and knitted of lemon yellow mohair with striking black bordering. Admirable indeed for the warmer fall days, but, when winds do blow, fancy its comfort and its effectiveness if its sleeveless jacquette be worn over a lightweight jumper knitted, say, in gay plaids with yellow and black predominating. Perhaps, a heather mixture introducing ruddy autumn tones would make even more of a pleasing color study. At any rate the experiment is worth trying, especially as designers anticipating this demand for sleeveless jacquette, skirt and jumper to match, have employed the method this season of making individual garments which harmonize in coloring. Thus one may buy separate or ensuite scarf, jumper and two-piece suit, which are related to each other in color and design.

Thrifty mothers and alert seamstresses delight in the vogue for combining two materials in frocks for school girls. This allows the use of short lengths of cloth, remnants and left-overs from the wardrobes of grownups, when putting together the little girl's school dresses and the pleasant exercise of much ingenuity. To make a new dress grow where two old ones are doing nothing, is an accomplishment to be proud of.

A pretty example of a school frock made of two materials appears here and the design is adapted to any of the serviceable wool or crepe dress fabrics that are used for daytime frocks. It also suggests a solution to the problem of lengthening or enlarging a dress that is outgrown, but still has much service in it. Two shades of one color, or two contrasting colors may be chosen and the two different materials used—as twill or serge with velveteen, flannel and duvetyn or wool goods with taffeta. For a pretty finish, sure to delight the little wearer, a spray of gay flowers (done in simple embroidery) as shown in the illustration, may be added.



FOR SMALL GIRL'S ADORNMENT

For slim little girls very pretty, straight-line dresses have plaited panels set in on each side a few inches below the waistline. A favored trimming for school girls' dresses is made of inch-wide strips of bright colored flannels, or in silk, with three or four strips stitched together to form a border about the bottom of the skirt, around the neck and as a finish for the sleeves. HIS BLIGHTED ROMANCE

By RICHARD CONNELL

P. ELMORE COWLEY stopped his car. He stopped it expertly, with one manicured hand on the brake. He stopped it with a devil-may-care nonchalance. His features wore an aloof, superior smile; his manner, as he surveyed his car, was slightly bored, and had a touch of hauteur about it; it was P. Elmore Cowley's imitation of an English duke as played by a motion picture actor reared in a barber shop. In his mind's eye his car was a costly limousine of foreign extraction, a roaring, throbbing bull of a car, with racy, rakish lines. Actually it was an elevator in a big Sixth avenue department store.

Daily now, for three years, P. Elmore Cowley had piloted the elevator up and down, down and up. He was a youngish, plumpish, blondish man; if he had but half an inch more chin he could have posed for collar advertisements. In the tone of a lord of the manor addressing his tenants, he said, crisply:

"Going up! Step to the rear of the car. Don't crowd, madam. There are other cars. Going up!"

Again he brought his car to a stop. In swift, mechanical accents he announced:

"Second flood! Men's and boys' clothing, groceries, fishing tackle, mops, lampshades, punching-bags, toys, laces and bathing suits. Anybody want second? Going up! Step to the rear of the car, please."

Up he went. He stood very erect and stern at the throttle. In his mind's eye he was a colonel in the red and gold uniform of his majesty's Royal Lancers; actually his uniform was gray and bore on its sleeve the monogram S. & K., which stood for Stein & Katz, who owned the store. He stopped the car so abruptly that a lady passenger almost swallowed her artificial teeth.

"Third floor!" he chanted. "Ladies' shoes and blouses, children's hats and wraps, art goods, hardware, negligees, hair goods, clocks, hats, books, stoves, furs and pianos. Going up! Step to the rear of the car, please!"

The elevator slid skyward. Mentally P. Elmore was cruising up Fifth avenue in his roadster, an heiress by his side; he was wearing white spats and smelled of Parisian perfume; this was his constant day dream. The figure "4" painted on the floor jerked him back to real life, caused him, by habit, to stop his car and automatically call out:

"Fourth floor! Ladies' and misses' cloaks, suits and evening gowns, phonographs, toilet goods, underwear, tires, corsets and rugs! Going up! Step to the rear of the car, please."

P. Elmore Cowley was worldly. He coveted things of the flesh—limousines, monogrammed cigarettes, silk pajamas, caviar for breakfast, a duplex apartment on Park avenue, and no work. It struck him that the easiest way to attain this bliss was to marry an heiress who would support him in the style to which he was unaccustomed. He felt sure that he was the mental equal of any heiress; he had once read a book. But how could he meet an heiress? That was the problem. No doubt he had carried many dollar princesses in his car; but an elevator is a poor place to start a romance.

P. Elmore went about it scientifically. He saved his money; he purchased (second hand) a dinner jacket and a pair of white flannels. He invested his savings in a week-end at a fashionable summer hotel. There he contrived to introduce himself to Eloise Lubbock, daughter of the flypaper king, rated at three million. P. Elmore made sure of that, first of all. Eloise was plain and rather bulky, but it was the figure in her bank book that captivated P. Elmore. He worked fast. One word led to another. She invited him to visit her in the fall at her parents' apartment on Riverside drive. Then he returned to town—and the store. He was sorry he could not linger; but, he explained, Wall street needed him.

Fall came. P. Elmore Cowley, in a snappy suit, set forth to conquer. He took Miss Lubbock to the theater. He told her all about the book he had read; he dropped hints about directors' meetings, and big deals in oil and sugar; he mentioned running into Reggie Vandergilt at the club, he expressed regret that his town car and roadster were both out of commission and apologized for bringing her home in a vulgar taxicab. Toward midnight he and Miss Lubbock returned to the lofty apartment house where dwelt her parents.

"But I'm sure we met before," she was saying. "There's something so familiar about your face—"

"Perhaps we met at the Piping Rock Hunt club," he suggested, "or at some party at the Ritz or Sherry's. Or maybe it was at Newport or Monte Carlo. Or, perhaps, you saw me playing polo, somewhere."

"I wonder where it was," she repeated, puzzled.

They had stepped into the private elevator and she pressed the button. Softly the car stole up. It stopped. On the door P. Elmore Cowley saw painted the figure "4." Swiftly, mechanically he called out:

"Fourth floor! Ladies' and misses' cloaks, suits and evening gowns, phonographs, toilet goods, underwear, tires, corsets and rugs! Going up! Step to the rear of the car, please!"

Then she knew.

WHO'S WHO in the WORLD

If Alice Should Write Her Memoirs

It is said that society in Washington is talking rather excitedly and a little apprehensively about a rumor that Mrs. Nicholas Longworth is engaged in writing her memoirs. If the daughter of T. R. should tell the story of social and political Washington as she has known it the book would be the best seller for a long time to come. The former Alice Roosevelt has the ability, the sense of humor, the spice of malice and the daring to tell it well. It would be an uncomfortable book for some people, probably; but a mighty interesting one for most. Perhaps Mrs. Longworth remembers the day when all sorts of yarns about her own irrepressible self were being related. She may feel that it is now her turn to get even.

Yes, Alice has plenty of nerve. In the famous 1912 convention she was an interested and most partisan spectator. In that convention, Elihu Root presided and directed the operation of the steamroller. The T. R. supporters greeted each bang of the gavel, each adverse ruling with bitterly derisive cries of "Toot, toot!" Returning to Washington on the same train with the senator, Alice encountered him in the aisle. He stood aside to let her pass, but the daughter of T. R. rose on tip-toe as if to whisper to him. The senator gravely and politely inclined his head toward her; whereupon she "toot-tooted" in his ear.

Soft Words From the "Tiger of Mexico"

Gen. Plutarcho Elias Calles—"Tiger of Mexico"—and its President-elect, is making a trip to Europe before his inauguration. He passed through the United States, from New Orleans to New York, had a consultation with Samuel Gompers and talked more or less for publication. He will spend some time in Paris to enable the women in his party to purchase the latest gowns and hats. His party of nine includes his two daughters, Natalie and Ernestina; his brother, Rodolfo, with his wife and daughters, Lydia; another brother, Arthur.

The general was optimistic about Mexico's future. He said he was one of the first "drys" in Mexico and it was largely through his efforts that Sonora, his state, went dry in 1915. He hoped to see prohibition become effective throughout Mexico and also to see the gambling along the border done away with. Concerning American oil companies operating in Mexico, the General said:

"I am absolutely in favor of oil companies owning property in Mexico, and there will be no disposition on the part of my administration, when it assumes office, to take over the property of any of these corporations. We will welcome American capital as well as other capital in the development of Mexico."

"Mexico," he says," has a special affection for the United States. The two nations should work together in sympathy and harmony. The rule of class and the era of special benefits for special classes is over in Mexico."

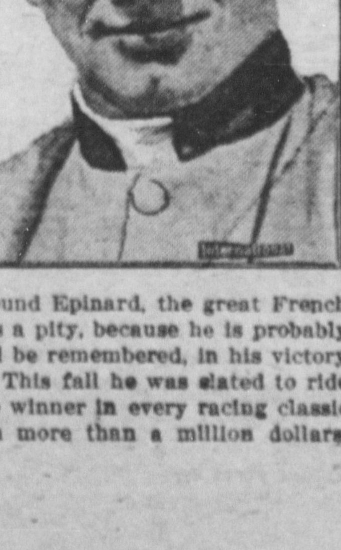
Texas Woman's Odd Political Campaign

Politics is a queer game, but it would be hard to find a more picturesque primary campaign than that in Texas, where Mrs. Miriam W. Ferguson ran for the Democratic nomination for governor as a vindication of her husband, James E. Ferguson, the former governor, who was impeached in 1917. Her husband managed her campaign and they spoke from the same platform. Previous to her marriage in 1899 she was Miss Miriam Wallace of Bell county.

Mrs. Ferguson got 140,906 votes and stood second to Felix D. Robertson of Dallas, 186,996 votes. So Mrs. Ferguson apparently earned a place in the run-off primary.

James Edward Ferguson, her husband, has had a varied career. He was born in Bell county, Texas, in 1871, had a district school education and spent two years on the Pacific coast and in Colorado as a laborer, teamster, miner and foreman of railroad construction gangs. Next he was a farmer in Bell county. He was admitted to the Texas bar and practiced in Belton and Temple. Next he organized a bank. Then he entered politics by being elected governor in 1914 on a "business man's ticket."

Earl Sande Says He Will Ride Again



The racing public—and it is a large one—reads every word that is printed concerning the condition of Earl Sande, convalescing in the hospital at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., after his fall at the Saratoga track. Cables from all over the world show the concern felt in this internationally famous jockey of the Rancocas stable. An X-ray photograph showed a broken rib and a leg broken in two places above the knee. It was feared at first that Sande's leg would have to be amputated. Then it was said that he would never be able to ride again. Sande grinned and said he'd "fool 'em all." At this writing there seems no reason why he should not resume his riding, though he has planned because of increasing weight, either to ride abroad or to enter the ranks of the trainers.

Sande, of course, will not be in shape to ride in the international races in the East and Kentucky that center around Epinard, the great French horse, now in training at Saratoga. And that is a pity, because he is probably the best jockey of the day. He rode Zev, it will be remembered, in his victory over Papyrus, the English champion, last fall. This fall he was slated to ride Zev again and Grey Lag. Sande has ridden the winner in every racing classic except the Futurity and his mounts have won more than a million dollars. Sande is twenty-six years old and married.

READY FOR 1925 MOTOR TAGS

Automobile Owners Will Receive Filled-Out Application Blanks.

Automobile owners are urged to file applications for 1925 licenses early and co operate with the State Highway Department, at Harrisburg, in avoiding congestion in the department such as marked the distribution of licenses last year. Filled-out application blanks are being mailed to automobile owners from Harrisburg. This is a change from other years.

Thousands of dollars in notary fees will be saved motorists, and much delay and confusion eliminated under the new method of supplying regsitrations. Secretary Wright has issued the following statement:

'Prior to the year 1925, it was the custom in Pennsylvania for motor vehicle owners to make application for registration of their motor vehicles before a notary public, justice of the peace, or other officer empowered to administer oaths. In many hundreds of thousands of cases applicants swore to the same facts year after year, paying a fee of at least 50 cents. Although a fee was paid for filling the application and administering the oath, thousands of applications were re-returned for correction because of oversight on the part of the [illegible]tering the oath of the applicant themselves.

"In order to eliminate the needless return of many applications, the application forms in the future will be made out in the automobile division and mailed to the applicant for his signature and remittance. This mailing will begin Tuesday, Sept. 2, and will continue until Oct. 15, at which time it is believed all motor vehicle owners in Pennsylvania will have received their form of application for the year 1925.

"Motorists are particularly warned to refrain from requesting application forms until October 15. If by that time they have not received their form of application, they should communicate with the automobile division, giving their name and address, as well as their title number, and a duplicate form will immediately be sent to them.

"Another service the department will render this year will be the forwarding of a return addressed envelope in which the applicant should inclose his application and fee in the amount listed upon the application.

"The 1924 license tags are valid until midnight, December 31, 1924, while operators' licenses are valid until midnight, February 28, 1925. A similar system has been installed for operators' licenses, and forms for renewal of such licenses will be forwarded from this division January 1, 1925.

"If the operator's address has changed since he was issued 1924 license tags or certificate of title, the automobile division should be advised immediately in order that records may be changed and form forwarded with the proper address named thereon.

"Applications for 1925 license tags will be acted upon within twenty-four hours of their receipt by the automobile division."

BASEBALL NOTES

College Forfeits Last Game to Millheim; Banquet Tonight.

State College forfeited their lone chance to climb out of last place in the County baseball league on Saturday when they failed to make an appearance at Millheim for a scheduled game. The close of the season left the teams in pretty much the same order as they have been all season. Last Thursday the champion Bellefonte aggregation walloped State College, 9—0, and in Saturday's double header with [illegible] and lost one 9—2 and 8—2. Millheim also won one from Centre Hall on Thursday 6—4.

The standing of the clubs is as follows:

	Won	Lost	Percentage
Bellefonte	23	7	767
Millheim	16	12	571
Centre Hall	10	20	333
State College	9	19	321

A testimonial banquet will be tendered the members of the Bellefonte club on this Thursday evening, Sept. 4, at the Brockerhoff House. Every member of the club is urged to be present.

OVER THE COUNTY

C. Nevin Hockman, the poultryman of Centre Hall, has purchased an acre of ground adjoining his property and will expand his business accordingly.

It has been announced that the Hon. Ellis H. Orvis will speak on National Defense Day at Millheim, Sept. 12. He will be accompanied by Col. Theodore Boal.

There is still considerable of the oats crop to be harvested. Some fields that ripened early and were cut and put on shock have been completely soaked by the recent rains, and unless continuous favorable weather prevails the crop will be destroyed.

Dr. Gerald D. Wendt who has been the head of the research laboratories of the Standard Oil Co., for some years, has been selected as dean of the school of chemistry and physics at State College. This department has been without a permanent head since the death of Dr. Pond, four years ago.

Numerous black beetles have appeared in C. H. Breon's potato patch at Millheim. All the stalks of some of the rows have been entirely stripped of leaves. The bugs are beginning to work on the corn stalks.

Millheim's industrial plants—the hosiery mill and the silk mill—it appears have plenty of work ahead. The latter continued to operate when similar mills all over the state were closed down. The hosiery mill, kept booming right along most of the summer and laid-off very few of their employes.

At a meeting held at State College recently it was decided that State College and Penn's Valley would unite in observing National Defense Day on September 12. The celebration will be held at Boalsburg and a basket picnic will be a feature of the day. The College people will enroll as a unit and will march in the parade as such. They will bring their own band.

SCHOOL OPENED TUESDAY

Several New Features in Grade Rooms; Large Enrollment.

Vacation days are over for another nine months. On Tuesday the schools opened for the beginning of the 1924—25 term. A departure in class instruction from last year's method is being tried out in the four higher grades in the Allegheny street school. Formerly, the teachers in the various subjects moved from one room to the other. This year each teacher is assigned to a room permanently, and the pupils move from room to room at the end of each period. In short these grades are being operated on the same method as the High School, with the exception that there is no main assembly hall, the pupils of each grade having their own opening exercises in the morning.

It is thought that enrollment in the High School will equal that of last year, if not surpass it. On Wednesday there were 318 pupils registered, as against 327 at the end of the first month of the 1923 term. There are 283 grade pupils in the Bishop street school and 322 in the Allegheny street building. Teachers institute will be held the week of October 20th, this year.

United Sportsmen Organized.

A branch of the United Sportsmen of America was organized at a meeting at Baileyville last Thursday evening. The organization is designed primarily to preserve and protect game animals, birds and fish. Game warden Thomas Mosier delivered an address on methods of game protection. Other speakers were Thomas H. Harter, of Bellefonte, and J. Laird Holmes and D. F. Kapp, of State College. The matter of placing black bear under protection was discussed by several individuals, but was not formally brought before the meeting. Other matters relative to local game protection were discussed, and it is felt that this section of the State, which is one of the few good hunting and fishing districts left, will greatly benefit through the efforts of this organization.

Two Weddings in Court House.

A rather unusual happening was the performing of two weddings in the library of the Court House during the past week. The first was that last Friday when Walter R. VanVoorhis and Hanna Ellen Grove, both of State College, were united in marriage by the Rev. Wilson P. Ard. The other took place on Saturday morning when Clarence B. Blair and Irene P. W. Wagner, the former of Tyrone and the latter of Port Matilda, were joined in wedlock, also by Rev. Mr. Ard.

Name Mountain "Trezyulny."

In honor of [illegible], Polish refugee and noted engineer, who surveyed much of Pennsylvania and mapped the Susquehanna river and its islands, the State Geographic Board, at Harrisburg, on Tuesday, decided to name a mountain in Centre County for him. The mountain has not been designated.

Wins Golf Championship.

J. Wynn Fredericks, of Lock Haven, is the new golf champion of the Clinton Country Club. Fredericks defeated Senator "Dick" Quigley, 2-up, in the finals of the club tournament on Monday, and gained possession for one year of the R. F. Rich cup, which was won last year by Stanley S. Furst.

Salesman Had Answer for Silly Old Saying

A salesman in an Iowa town called on a storekeeper who had an old-fashioned store in a splendid location. The salesman was of the creative type and was urging the storekeeper to change his methods, and to adopt new selling ideas.

The reply of the storekeeper was: "Oh, these old methods were good enough for my dad, and I guess they're good enough for me."

The salesman answered, and he could make this answer because of his experience and familiarity with the situation: "Your dad, when he established this store, was the most progressive merchant of his time—that's why he won success. If he had been content with the methods of your grandfather he would never have established any business at all. Your dad, and I knew him well, never refused to consider new ideas; he adopted the things that had proved successful with other merchants. If he were alive today he would be the first one to recognize that the community your store is serving is greatly changed, and that new methods must be adopted to take advantage of new conditions."—Forbes Magazine.

Got Only a Scent.

"A little fellow, I know," writes M. K., "was diligently sweeping off his neighbor's walk and I stopped and asked him what he was getting for his work.

"Oh," he said, "Mr. Conley promised he would let me smell his flowers when I got through."

To Evade Punishment.

Bobby—Can't I change my name today, ma?

Mother—What in the world do you want to change your name for?

Bobby—'Cause pa said he will whip me when he gets home as sure as my name's Robert.

RACER MET DEATH

Joe Boyer Killed When Machine Wrecks on Altoona Speedway.

Joseph Boyer, Jr., 34 years old, speed king of the automobile racing game, died on Monday night as the result of injuries sustained when his machine skidded and crashed into the outer rail on the eastern bank of the Altoona track on Labor day. Boyer was in second place, one-half mile behind Murphy, the leader, when the accident happened. He was ripping off laps at the rate of 125 miles an hour and had only 11 miles to go to complete the 150-mile classic. His legs were crushed so that amputation was necessary. Death was due to shock and loss of blood. Blood transfusions failed to give the improvement expected. Hundreds of drivers, mechanics and citizens offered their blood for transfusion.

The race was won by Jimmy Murphy, who covered the distance at an average speed of 114 miles an hour. This race was somewhat slower than the flag day classic, due to the menace of the wreck of Boyer's car, which hung on the upper side of the track, threatening to become dislodged any minute and slide down into the path of the rushing cars. Murphy was the only driver to officially finish the race, the 9 other cars being flogged on account of the wreck. Murphy, Milton, Comer, Shafer, Cooper and Mourre finished in the order named Recovered Car.

Word was received by Frank Crawford last week that his Maxwell coupe supposedly stolen by escaped prisoners several weeks ago, was in the hands of the police of Youngstown, O. Mr. Crawford immediately went to that place and identified the car as his. It was in perfect running order, but all accessories, spare tire and tools were missing. It is thought by the police that the thief became aware that he was under suspicion and abandoned the car in a hurry, as it was half full of gasoline, and full of oil. Mr. Crawford considers himself exceedingly lucky in getting the car at all, as only a very small percentage of the cars stolen ever find their way back to the owners.

Woman Breaks Collar Bone.

Mrs. Elizabeth Tipton, of New Kensington, suffered a fracture of the collar bone on Monday when she was hurled from an automobile nearby the Loveland bridge, at Lamar. Elizabeth Hill, of Punxsutawney, and Mrs. S. T. Riegel, of Salona, were bruised. They were enroute to Howard, their Buick being in a line of fourteen cars. Samuel Ulmer, of Williamsport, driving a Chrysler, applied his brakes without warning and the Riegel car crashed into it from the rear.

Million Motor Tags.

Pennsylvania automobile license number 1,000,000 was last Thursday issued to Mrs. Paul D. Wright, wife of the secretary of highways. This is the highest number ever issued in the state, and it is said Mr. Wright's 10-year-old daughter had informed her father that number had to come to the family. Dr. C. H. Hadley, director of the bureau of plant industry, received the first tag of the new series, which is A-1. This begins the second series of numbers.

PRISON GUARD CONFESSED

Admits Permitting Smuggling Saws to Convicts

Accused of smuggling small steel saws to a prisoner in the western penitentiary at Pittsburgh, and planning for the delivery of guns to other prisoners, Harry W. Holtgraver Jr., a guard at the prison, was arrested last Thursday when he reported for duty. Gertrude Perry and P. H. Welshone, said to be friends of Holtgraver, also were arrested and held as material witnesses.

According to police, Holtgraver confessed that he had smuggled a dozen saw blades to "Bud" Harding, a prisoner, for which he received $17. He also admitted, police said, that he had surreptitiously mailed letters for two other convicts. In these letters, it was said, directions were given to the convicts' friends to pay $4,200 to Holtgraver after he had smuggled pistols to them.

STARTED for work eight weeks ago, stumbled, fell, broke an ankle; been home ever since, mending.

My ÆTNA ACCIDENT POLICY has kept me in funds, however. Paid me every month at the rate of $50 a week. Would have paid the hospital, too, had I gone there. Now that I'm out, I'll get $25 a week until I can go to work.

You're a wise man and ought to investigate this ÆTNA proposition. When you learn the ÆTNA people have paid over 128,000 claims, you wonder how you've gone so long without getting a hard jolt from Old Man Accident, don't you?

THE FEDERAL RESERVE BANK

Organized in 1913 to concentrate the banking resources of the country and to provide circulating notes as needed.

Twelve banks form the system located to serve all sections of the country.

All national banks must join. State banks may join. These are called Member Banks.

All member banks must subscribe for a certain amount of capital stock and keep on deposit, with the bank in their district, a certain percentage of their deposits.

The aggregate of these deposits provides a great reservoir of money available for use.

Formerly this reserve was scattered among thousands of banks. Each one kept in its vault useless gold coin and currency. The gold is now held by the Reserve Bank and serves as a basis for the issue of new money when needed.

In this way one dollar in gold now produces five dollars credit.

THUS

The Federal Reserve Bank concentrates, co-ordinates and makes effective funds that before were scattered and ineffective

Furnishes currency that can be increased or diminished at once.

Formerly this was slow and uncertain process.

Affords means for rediscounting commercial paper thus increasing each member bank's ability to loan.

Removes apprehension and inspires confidence.

Facilitates the free collection of bank checks and in many other ways furnishes valuable service.

Agriculture, commerce and industry are represented in the management which is free from political control.

Through the Federal Reserve Bank the money of the people is wisely used for the public good.

The Braganza, one of the largest diamonds in the world, was found by three criminals, who had been sent into exile among the cannibal tribes and wild beasts in the Brazilian interior. The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

LEGION MEET WILL BE RECORD-BREAKER

With three great conventions in progress simultaneously in four convention halls, the 1924 gathering of the American Legion and its affiliated bodies at St. Paul, Minn., from September 16 to 19 promises to be one of the greatest veterans' conventions in the history of the country. Sixty thousand visitors are expected to make the pilgrimage to the convention city, coming from every state in the Union and from many foreign lands.

Greetings to the Legionnaires will be extended on behalf of the convention city by Mayor Arthur E. Nelson, himself a Legionnaire, and on behalf of the Minnesota department of the Legion by its commander. Formal response will be made on behalf of National Commander John R. Quinn, of the Legion, by James T. Williams, Jr., editor of the Boston Transcript.

There will also be greetings from many other organizations. Among these are the Grand Army of the Republic, the United Confederate Veterans, the United Spanish War Veterans, the Women's Overseas league, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Disabled American Veterans, the Knights of Columbus, the Legion Auxiliary and the Forty and Eight. Commander W. B. Haldeman of the United Confederate Veterans has stated that he will attend the convention.

At the opening session of the convention on Monday morning, Commander Quinn will make his report. It is of particular interest in this connection that this convention marks the fifth anniversary of the permanent organization of the Legion across the river from St. Paul at Minneapolis in 1919.

Among the distinguished speakers who will address the convention are Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the United States veterans' bureau; Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor; Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball arbiter, and John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross.

Impressive memorial services in honor of the World war dead will conclude the first session of the convention. Miss Alma Forker, of Bakersfield, Cal., who has been chosen as convention soloist, will sing.

Tuesday afternoon will be given over to the great convention parade, in which 25,000 marchers and more than 300 bands and drum corps will take part. Election of national officers on Friday morning will conclude the convention, which will be occupied in the meantime with formulation of Legion policies and in a round of convention festivities.

Dinner, Social Event for Legion Auxiliary

Foremost on the program of the American Legion Auxiliary convention, which opens at St. Paul, on September 15, is the state's dinner, which is also the leading social event of the entire Legion convention. This banquet will be held at the Masonic temple at 7:30 o'clock on Tuesday evening.

Brilliant decorations, beautifully gowned women, lights, music, combine to make a function which is not soon forgotten. Each department has its own special table, which is decorated in distinctive fashion by the department itself. The variegated schemes contribute largely to the dash and splendor of the scene.

National officers, department delegates, national executive committeewomen and all chairmen of the national committees of the Auxiliary will be present. The national commander of the Legion and notables on convention committees will be guests.

Sessions of the convention proper will be held at the Central Presbyterian church and will open on Monday afternoon. Judge Kenesaw M. Landis will address the Auxiliary. Election of national officers will be held on Friday morning and will conclude the convention.

Damage Memorial Steps; Forced to Pay Neat Sum

Disregard of the fine marble steps that adorn the entrance to the Legion Memorial building at Shamokin, Pa., recently cost Vincent Lopez, famous leader of a dance orchestra that appeared in the Legion gymnasium last May, a neat sum in damages. In removing their trunks from the memorial building following the entertainment, members of the orchestra dragged their trunks down the marble stairs to the street, inflicting a number of dents in the ornamental stairway. Lopez and his organization appeared in the vicinity of Shamokin recently and a committee of the American Legion and "old John Law" armed with a warrant attended the concert. The illustrious leader at first presented an indignant mood when the claim of damages was made, but finally settled in full when confronted with a warrant and the prospects of the city bastile.

MISS FORKER IS OFFICIAL SOLOIST

Alma Forker, of Bakersfield, Cal., veteran of the Chemical Warfare service of the United States army, descendant of Spanish Conquistadores and of Morgans of American Revolutionary fame and of the noted Lees of Virginia, will sing at the sixth annual convention of the American Legion in St. Paul, Minn., on September 15 to 19. She has just been selected by National Commander John R. Quinn from a list of forty applicants as convention solist.

Sixty thousand veterans, it is estimated, will hear the California songbird, who, while war was on, thought that it was the duty of a young and able-bodied American woman to do more than sing for the boys in France and so enlisted in the Chemical Warfare branch of Uncle Sam's army. Miss Forker found time from her military duties to sing for the soldiers, too. She became a familiar figure at camp and canteen.

Born in California, Miss Forker has an established reputation as a church and concert singer in her native state and also in New York city. Beginning her musical education with the study of the piano and becoming later an accomplished violinist, she went to New York to cultivate her natural vocal ability. While there, she filled numerous engagements in and about the metropolis. Returning to California, she has been teaching voice and filling concert engagements throughout the state.

Alma Forker.

The convention solist is the only woman member of Frank S. Reynolds post of the Legion at Bakersfield. She is also president of the newly organized Bakersfield unit of the Legion Auxiliary.

Big Time Planned for Members of "40 and 8"

Spicy and full of pep will be the program which awaits the 25,000 members of La Societe des Quarante Hommes et Huit Chevaux, practically every one of whom is expected to attend the national convention held in connection with the American Legion at St. Paul, from September 15 to 19. The boxcar society will live up to its reputation as the playground of the Legion, it is said.

Convention affairs will culminate for the Forty and Eighters on Thursday. That afternoon will witness the election of national officers and in the evening will be staged the great promenade at the Minnesota state fair grounds, where some 300 men will be initiated.

Proceedings will be enlivened in true Forty and Eight fashion by 15 Hommes-Chevaux bands. They will take part in the great convention parade Tuesday afternoon and will play the Forty and Eighters on their way to the depot to entrain for the doings at the fair grounds.

Sessions will be held at Junior Pioneer hall in the afternoon, so as not to interfere with the sessions of the Legion convention proper, it was announced.

Open hours will be the order of the day at all St. Paul clubs and social organizations for the annual convention of the American Legion, it has been announced. Special arrangements for housing, parties, athletic and aquatic sports and other courtesy privileges have been made by the Y. M. C. A. and the K. of C. for the boys they served in 1917 and 1918.

Shriners, in addition to extending the facilities of their building, will conduct a series of automobile tours to points of historic, scenic and industrial interest in and about St. Paul for the various days of the convention. Distinguished guests and officials of the Legion will be housed at the Athletic and Minnesota clubs, where St. Paul people will be given a chance to meet them. At the Elks' club, the White Bear Yacht club, the Auto club and other civic organizations every effort will be made for the entertainment of the convention crowds.

Want 1925 Convention

Several invitations have been extended to the American Legion for its 1925 annual convention. Louisville, Ky., is seeking the convention with the support of the state department. Newark, N. J., is also after the honor of entertaining the Legionnaires. San Francisco, Cal., has extended an invitation for 1925, offering the use of its $2,000,000 Exposition auditorium. San Francisco is the second city in which a national convention of the Legion has been held, to extend a pressing invitation to the veterans to return.

College Freshmen to Undergo Test

Psychological Check Is Devised by Educators

Chicago.—Psychological tests, prepared from material furnished by five of the principal universities of the United States, will be given to freshmen of more than a hundred colleges and universities, and will present themselves to the field of education as an entirely new step to improve present methods of determining who are the brilliant and who the dull students.

The announcement, together with the description of the tests, which are said to be the most thorough of any in the history of educational psychology, was made by Associate Professor L. L. Thurstone of the University of Chicago department of psychology, authority on college and army tests.

Five universities, co-operating in the program, which is under the direction of the American council on education, have submitted to Dr. Thurstone the most complete and satisfactory tests for determining general and specific intelligence which their psychologists have been able to devise. The institutions thus co-operating are: University of Chicago, Princeton university, University of Minnesota, Dartmouth college and Northwestern university.

It has been generally admitted, according to Dr. Thurstone, that present-day entrance examinations and requirements are inadequate to indicate the bright students or eliminate the unequipped. A freshman may enter from high school with a fair record and then fail in college during the first year. It is essential to provide some method which will supplement the scholarship records from high school and which will determine accurately who should be allowed to enter. Each university requires that a freshman shall have a satisfactory high school average before it will admit him to college.

Outline of Tests.

The general nature of the tests is as follows:

Ingenuity in using the English language. (Submitted by Dr. H. T. Moore, Dartmouth college.)

Arithmetical reasoning. (Submitted by Dr. L. L. Thurstone, University of Chicago.)

Artificial language test to determine how quickly a student can adapt himself to new words and new grammatical forms. (Stuart C. Dodd, graduate student at Princeton university.)

Proverb test. The student is asked to match two lists of proverbs and to indicate those that have identical meanings. (Mrs. Thelma Gwinn Thurstone, University of Chicago.)

Reading test. The student is required to read and summarize paragraphs of fairly difficult prose. (A. W. Kornhauser, University of Chicago.)

"Opposites" test. The student is asked to make words of opposite meaning. (Dr. C. C. Brigham, Princeton university.)

Making quantitative estimates based on facts available to everybody: "How many automobiles in the world," etc. (Doctor Thurstone.)

Common sense situations. A test for the use of good judgment. (Prof. Cyril Burt, University of London.)

English grammar test. (Mrs. Thurstone.)

Not Sanity Tests.

"These are not tests of sanity," Dr. Thurstone explains, "but tests to determine whether a student is capable of doing college work.

"The work done in college will be compared with the intelligence records of the tests, and if it is not up to the intellectual standards these show, we can see that some factor other than lack of ability is holding the student back.

"If at the beginning it is shown that he is mentally unequipped for college, he can be refused admission. If, on the other hand, he is shown by the tests to be fully equipped mentally, and then turns out to be lazy, he can be excluded after the first semester.

"Sometimes outside interests and problems hamper college work. Again the tests will show those who ought to do good work. If they are not doing the type of work which the tests indicate, the college deans will be able to find out what is wrong. Often illness, love affairs, or financial difficulties prove obstacles in the way of standard college work. When the dean understands, he will be able to get at the problem and to aid in its solution."

Autoist Chokes Wildcat With Wire

Grand Junction, Colo.—Victor Douglas, a miner, was driving with a companion in an automobile near here recently when a wildcat crossed the road in front of them and climbed to a ledge on the cliff above the road. Douglas snared the beast with a long stick and baling wire.

The enraged cat sprang, but Douglas dodged and was able to keep it from closing in on him by whirling it around him at the end of the wire.

Finally Douglas began to grow dizzy, and, giving the wire a final swing, he hurled it against the cliff and dashed for his car. But the bobcat did not move. The men found it had been choked to death.

Berlin's Zoo Gets Abyssinian Animals

Hamburg. — The strangest cargo unloaded here in years was taken off the Norwegian freighter Randsfjord recently. It was a consignment of animals from Abyssinia for the Berlin zoo.

The cargo included dromedaries, jackals, panthers, leopards, 30 large apes, 24 porcupines, giant turtles with a combined weight of 2,500 pounds, and 80 smaller animals of prey of various descriptions.

The unloading proved no easy matter. The camels, for instance, simply lay down on the upper deck and refused to walk down the gangway. They finally had to be lifted off bodily with the aid of pulleys and cranes. A leopard managed to aim a vicious blow with his paw at one of the expert tamers of the zoo who had been hired to assist. A long scar on his forehead bears evidence that the leopard aimed straight. Every animal had to be inspected by an official veterinary before it was allowed to land.

BEST SABLE FIELD SAID TO BE IMPERILED BY OIL

Russia to Decide Between the Two Industries.

Moscow.—Sables or oil? That is the question which the Soviet government's planning commission must decide.

Far off in the northern Pacific the peninsula of Kamchatka protrudes from the mainland like a dagger blade separating the Bering and Hunter seas. For decades Kamchatka has been Russia's best happy hunting ground for sables. Every year 5,000 of the little blue-black animals, whose skins are valued at approximately $500,000, were hunted down on the peninsula.

Now an expedition led by P. L. Polevov, a geologist of the Soviet geological survey, has discovered oil on Kamchatka. The oil is of an extra fine quality and yields 75 to 78 per cent of kerosene, whereas the best crude product of the Baku field yields only 40 per cent.

The find is of paramount importance to the economic development of Siberia. Russia's unfathomable petroleum resources in the Caucasus are too far from this vast domain, while the oil fields in northern Sakhalien, which have been granted as a concession to the Sinclair company, are still occupied by Japanese troops. Considerable pressure is therefore being put on the Moscow authorities to appropriate a sum of money for the opening of the Kamchatka field. But here the sables interfere.

The oil deposits which Professor Polevov has discovered are situated just below the trapping grounds for sables. The sables from the entire peninsula rush into this trapping space during a certain season of the year when the three rivers of the district overflow their banks. The small fur-bearing animals seek refuge in the high open preserve especially set aside for this purpose by the government. A decree prohibits any manner of industrial or mining activities in the area. And the soft sables, seeking refuge, find death. Experienced hunters have no difficulty in trapping the creatures wholesale. Kamchatka supplies one-fourth of Russia's sables.

Will madame be able to step into one of those brilliant shops on Fifth avenue next summer and buy herself a cape made of Kamchatka sable? It depends on the decision of the bolsheviks in Moscow. Will they annul the decree and permit the sinking of wells, thus to drive the sables away, or will they be kind to the sables and help them reach Paris and New York?

Firstborn Said to Lead in Mental Deficiency

London.—Defenders of primogeniture, backbone of the English hereditary principle, received a formidable blow when Dr. Robert Hutchinson stated before the British Medical association that two-thirds of the mentally deficient children he had had to deal with in his practice had been firstborn children.

Defenders of primogeniture point to the efficiency of innumerable European monarchs which history reveals, while the backers of Doctor Hutchinson's contention mention Benjamin Franklin, who was the fifteenth child of his parents, history being mute regarding the achievements of the first fourteen children of Josiah Franklin.

New Record in Raw Silk Race

America Winning Heats in Contests Whose Stakes Are Millions.

Washington.—Uncle Sam has been winning heats in one of the most dramatic races ever staged by trade—the raw silk transport race.

The course is 8,300 miles. Swiftest steamships, special trains for which speed limits are waived, seaplanes and airplanes participate. But there is no cheering crowd in the stands, because every mile of the race is concealed with the closest secrecy. The stakes are millions.

In 1918, 81 per cent of the United States' huge silk imports from Japan came in foreign steamers but within two years steamers flying the American flag in the Pacific have obtained an important share of this valuable trade.

Why silk is rushed from Yokohama to New York at breack-neck speed, outdistancing the best passenger service, and the thrilling details of this contest against time over the world's longest race course are told in the following bulletin issued by the National Geographic society:

Excepting gold and silver bullion, silk probably is the most precious commodity, weight for weight, carried on a large scale by commerce. A single special train will bring $5,000,000 worth of silk. Just as it costs dearly to ship money, high charges are put on silk shipments. The saving of two days' sailing time between Yokohama and Seattle is said to make a difference of 50 cents a bale at New York. Interest on the millions of dollars tied up multiplies at the rate of thousands of dollars a day and, in addition, there is costly insurance.

New Silk Course Record.

The world's record on the Yokohama-New York silk course was set up a few months ago when the Orient was brought within 13 days, 3 hours and 8 minutes of Manhattan. Laden with $5,500,000 worth of raw silk, the President Jackson made Seattle on the ninth day. A United States mail seaplane met the liner at Victoria and winged its way to Seattle, 100 miles away. It brought port documents and forwarded cargo papers to New York before the President Jackson docked.

Special port forces moved the rich consignment in three hours to a special silk train waiting with steam up. The swift Oriental limited passenger trains take 70 hours to reach Chicago; the "reefer," as the silk special is known to railroaders, makes it in 65 hours. Twelve cars were required for the President Jackson cargo. With Queen Silk goes a heavy cordon of train guards armed to the teeth. When the treasure train safely reaches New York the shipment is divided quickly among the consignees for storage in warehouses or dispatched to mills in such famous silk towns as Paterson, N. J., or Woonsocket, R. I.

Carried on Mystery Train.

Few people know when the "reefer" is on the rails. Like a ship of war, it virtually runs under sealed orders. Railroad divisions seldom know when it is coming or where it is going until it and orders arrive.

The previous speed record for silk shipments was made when the President Grant landed a $10,000,000 consignment at Seattle. The "reefer" brought this product of billions of caterpillars into New York in 13 days, 4 hours and 55 minutes out of Yokohama. Night air mail will be a boon to these New York silk merchants. Before silk shipments can be released many papers must be approved and inspected. Seattle has one of the two seaplane mail services in the United States, hence Queen Silk will suffer no embarrassment of delay. Night air mail will hasten dispatch of silk shipment papers to New York so there will be no slip when the dusty "reefer" reaches the Hudson.

Although silk culture originated in China and the very name China finds its birth in a term meaning "silk people," the United States looks to Japan for most of this raw material. American mills are weaving nearly 50,000,000 pounds of raw silk annually, of which about 80 per cent comes from Japanese mulberry orchards The ugly little silk worm is treated with great respect in the Orient for it brings to the Far Eastern peoples more than $300,000,000 from the United States alone.

Queen Silk's throne is as solid as the year it was set up by a Chinese princess, centuries before the birth of Christ. The Western world began to worship her when the crusaders went to the East "to kill the horned devils and returned to imitate the fine gentlemen they found there." The merchants of Venice, thriving on the West's new knowledge, like the merchants of New York today, guarded Queen Silk well; this single city-state built 300 men-of-war to convoy its silk fleets.

Britain Starts Leprosy Fight

Fund of $1,250,000 Sought to Combat the Malady in the Empire.

Manchester, England.—More than 300,000 persons in the British empire suffer from leprosy, it is estimated.

In this day of advanced medical science leprosy can be cured. So the British Empire Leprosy Relief association has been formed to raise funds to wage a campaign against leprosy in all parts of the empire. For this purpose $1,250,000 is needed.

To arouse interest in the work a public meeting took place in the Manchester town hall recently. Lord Mayor Jackson, who presided, introduced Sir Leonard Rogers, a Fellow of the Royal Society, one of the scientists responsible for the discovery of the new cure. In an interesting survey of leprosy and its treatment, first by segregation and latterly by means of both segregation and injections of preparations from oils, Sir Leonard said the disease still exists in European countries, including Russia, Turkey, Crete, Spain and Portugal.

"Leprosy is not highly infectious, as used to be thought, and it is not hereditary," he continued. "In 700 cases I have investigated in the last six years it was found that at least 70 per cent had lived in houses with other lepers before contracting the disease, and that at least 30 per cent had slept in the same beds with a leper. Attendants on lepers frequently get the disease, which is essentially one of house infection; children are especially liable to it.

"Segregation," Sir Leonard continued, "is of undoubted value, but it is a slow method and there are great difficulties in carrying it out in the tropics. It is inevitable that as long as we have nothing better to offer than isolation, amounting to imprisonment for life, the leper will hide the disease as long as possible.

Up to a few years age the only remedy of any value known was the old Indian remedy of chaulmoogra oil, and its nauseating qualities were such that most lepers could not take enough. In 1916, at the request of Doctor Heiser, who had obtained some success by means of injections, I, with the aid of chemists, began research work which resulted in the extraction from this oil of salts, solutions of which, when injected, proved far more effective in destroying the leper bacilli. It was the first instance known of the destruction of bacilli within the tissues by a vegetable substance. Today similar valuable preparations are being made from six different oils and used in the treatment of leprosy.

"The next advance came in 1919, when two American workers, Professor Dean and Doctor Hollmann, discovered a compound called ethylester chaulmoograte, which can be injected directly into the muscles instead of into the veins, and as this is less troublesome it is now in general use."

Americans Aiding Lepers.

After giving figures from several sources showing the remarkable success obtained in treating the disease, Sir Leonard said that at present only 10 per cent of the lepers in the British empire are getting the advantage of this treatment—"although the Americans are applying it to every leper in their dominions"—and that the British Empire Leprosy Relief association is being formed with the object of bringing it within the reach of all.

At the Strasburg international conference last July, Sir Leonard concluded, a resolution was passed at his suggestion that nations are not justified in segregating lepers for the benefit of other people unless they provide those lepers with the best possible treatment.

Sir William Milligan of the Royal infirmary, Manchester, said he had seen a case of leprosy in Manchester. He could not forget the impression made upon his mind by lepers while he was in Vienna. Some of them were most revolting. Manchester, having so large an interest in countries like India, the Malay peninsula and Africa, has a special duty to help in the elimination of this disease.

MOVEMENT TO POPULARIZE NATIVE FILMS IN CHINA

About Nine-Tenths of the Huge Population Never Have Seen a Moving Picture.

Shanghai.—Out of an estimated population of somewhere between 400,000,000 and 500,000,000, it is believed that 90 per cent of the people of China have never seen a motion picture.

For this reason an effort now under way to provide movies acted and produced by Chinese is interesting.

In China's largest centers and in the treaty ports the picture screen long has been commonplace and mixed audiences of Chinese and foreigners are thrilled over the film favorites, just as are audiences in the United States. But hitherto the sporadic efforts to popularize the movies in the interior of China have failed.

Within the last year several com[illegible] in Shanghai have undertaken to produce Chinese pictures, and perhaps a half dozen of these have been exhibited with varying degrees of success. As they necessarily were made by unskilled actors and more or less inexperienced directors, they have appeared crude in the eyes of the Chinese used to the finished foreign productions. These films are being sent tentatively into the centers of the interior, where it is necessary to throw up temporary mat sheds in which to show them.

A Shanghai picture man explained: "It is altogether a problem of educating the Chinese people to the movies." He then went on to tell the experience of a showman who invaded the interior with a number of films. The people wouldn't go to see the pictures, and so the showman adopted the expedient of paying his audiences to come, doling out handfuls of cash to each person who entered the makeshift theater. The showman's money gave out before his films, which were of foreign production, had gained popularity, and thus his efforts came to naught.

Later enterprises in Shanghai include one started by China's largest publishing concern, which is making efforts to improve the quality of the pictures, the acting, costuming and settings. Several of the country's leading actors of the speaking stage have been recruited for this work, which is being confined to plots based on stories purely Chinese.

How the efforts of these organizations will be received by China's inarticulate masses, and whether a Chinese Charlie Chaplin or a Mary Pickford in silken trousers will capture the country, are matters as difficult to conjecture as the answers to any other of the country's many questions.

MAKES PLEA FOR THIEF WHO HAD MENACED LIFE

Banker Shattuck Asks Mercy for Man Who Had None for Him.

Paris.—At the end of a trail of vengeance that led half way around the world and cost two lives, hundreds of thousands of dollars, Albert R. Shattuck, American millionaire, found—pity.

The story goes back to a day in 1922, when the soft-spoken butler in the Shattuck home on Washington square, New York, turned with a snarl upon his employers, and blew sharply on a whistle.

The gardener and one of the kitchen boys dropped their masks of servility and became snarling bandits, like their chief. Three other apaches, waiting outside, were admitted. Revolvers and ugly knives were whipped out.

No Hesitation to Kill.

The astonished banker, his wife and four loyal servants were driven down to the cellar at the pistol's point. There Mourey insulted Mrs. Shattuck vilely. Only the certainty that the apache would not hesitate to kill restrained the white-haired millionaire from violence. Into an airtight wine vault the bandits forced their victims, with curses and degrading remarks.

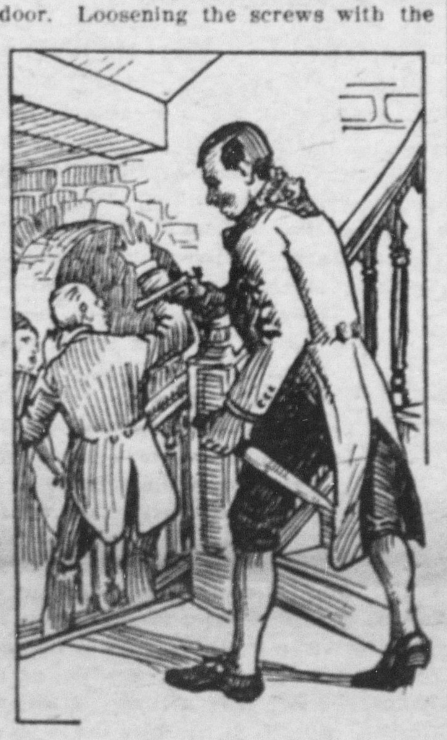
The door was slammed shut upon them and locked.

Death was but a few hours away for all, as the air was bad and scarce.

Upstairs, the bandits swiftly ransacked the house, took jewelry valued at $70,000 and made away scattering them over the world.

Some were caught, but Mourey disappeared.

Inside the vault, Shattuck alone kept his head. With a dime's edge and a broken penknife, the banker attacked the hinges of the heavy steel door. Loosening the screws with the utmost difficulty, he pried the door open and tottered, with his wife in his arms, into the cellar, just as every one was on the point of collapse.



Driven Down to the Cellar at the Pistol's Point.

From that day, Shattuck swore vengeance upon Mourey. He did not talk of it much, but private detective agencies learned quietly that there was no limit to the reward if they could trap the apache.

Mourey was heard of first in this country, then in that, hunted day and night, but always eluding pursuit.

Shattuck kept on the trail. It led to the Indies, then to Europe, then to Africa. Still the bandit kept ahead of the international police put on his track. Justice became the banker's one aim. Some called it vengeance. Then Mourey was trapped. A woman was the leader in the deed—his sweetheart, with whom he kept in touch throughout the flight.

Trapped With Sweetheart.

Growing bolder, the bandit came to Paris, or rather to a little villa outside the city, where his sweetheart used to meet him.

One day the gendarmes of Paris followed her to the villa and a revolver battle ensued before Mourey threw up his hands. One was mortally wounded. First an attempt was made to have the apache king taken to New York, but it was decided the French charges against him were the more serious. The jury found Mourey guilty as charged, resisting an officer with violence, which resulted in the fatal wounding of the police. The judge sentenced him to die on the guillotine.

The Shattucks, their long pursuit ended, wrote to Doumergue:

"Justice cannot ignore pity. This man has expressed regret for his crimes. We believe he is sincere."

Sought to End Life Where Son Is Buried

North Bergen, N. J.—Charles Alexander attempted suicide on the grave of his son in Fairview cemetery, according to police, who found his body stretched on the grass-covered mound which indicates the spot of his son's interment.

The police state Alexander went to the cemetery and remained at the grave throughout the night. It is said poison was used by the brooding man in his suicidal attempt. Physicians at a local hospital declared he will recover.

Edgar was the son's name. Seven years ago, at the age of nine, the boy was killed in a railroad accident.

Legend of Unicorn

Medieval conception of the unicorn as possessing great strength and fierceness may have been partly due to the fact that in certain passages of the Old Testament, the word R'em (translated in the authorized version, unicorn), refers to a two-horned animal, savage and quarrelsome, subdued to gentleness only at the side of a virgin. The idea of purity is included in the significance of the unicorn used in many coats of arms.

Painters at China's Mercy

In many respects the painter today is at the mercy of the Chinese workman, for without China bristles, now since the Russian supply has been decidedly cut off, the price of paint brushes would soar. The situation was extremely critical for a time during and after the war, but it is more stabilized today.

The ratio of school population to total population in the United States has declined from 31.3 in 1870 to 26.2 in 1920.

Odd Things That Happen

A London paper draws attention to two odd things that have recently happened at sea which must make an appeal even to a dull imagination.

One was a collision between an airplane and a steamer; the other was a curious case of damage to an airplane rising over the Dorset coast. The damage was first seen from land and was notified to the pilot in the sky by a wireless message. The pilot was instructed to make for the sea and land in shallow water, which he did, being picked up by a rowing boat.
